

A Theology of Fundraising

Intro

Throughout Scripture, we find many instances in which people gave to meet Kingdom needs. And the people involved were as varied as the locations and causes – at times coming from the most unlikely of places and the most surprising of sources. But always the exchange took place at the divine orchestration of God – through His leading, direction and moving in the midst of people. Sometimes it was from a heart of worship, and at other times, it was to meet a practical need. But always the result was a raising of the spiritual consciousness of people – a sense of knowing that God was at work and that a spiritual community existed beyond themselves for Something Greater.

Many think and have been taught that spiritual giving is merely the tithe to the church, but with a portrait of worship painted in the background – depicting responses because of what the Lord has done, we'll look at the intricate brush strokes of this portrait that indicate more to develop a theology of fundraising and broaden our Kingdom view. God used many means to accomplish His purposes – including fundraising. At His directive, people honorably solicited funds to further God's Kingdom. In this endeavor of discovering a theology of fundraising, you are encouraged to concentrate as you read the Scriptures on the asking – who was involved in the story and why they were motivated to ask or give. Read each Scripture passage fully, first allowing the Holy Spirit to openly impress upon your heart, then examine and determine the specifics as outlined below. In doing so, you will be amazed at God's design and purpose, and even more amazed at God, the Creator and Giver of all things.

A Theology of Fundraising

Conclusion

In this gallery hang many stories – brush strokes painting a beautiful picture of individuals giving to individuals, spiritual communities giving to other spiritual communities, of various places and people sensing God's leading and carrying out God's plans, meeting Kingdom needs. Community always underscored the act of giving and receiving among this spiritual family, and even when personal aid was given, the emphasis was always a Higher Purpose – ministering and carrying out His plans, displaying the essence of His Character among His people, resulting in worship of God's Glory.

The most pivotal words...“that there may be equality” (II Cor 8:13-15)...reveal the Divine Purpose of this Kingdom Design. Like the manna from heaven in Exodus, equal distribution was the desired goal with the excess of some ministering to the deficiency of others that true community would be experienced – a sensitivity to and reliance upon the need for one another with the absence of pettiness and self-sufficiency that inequality brings – a knowing that sustenance and provision comes daily from El-Shaddai, the One Who gives all things. This gives new conviction to those richly blessed who selfishly exist while others suffer without, including the inequality of larger churches and ministries with smaller churches and ministries. Likewise, in this family, we must be careful of the subtle expectation of being served versus serving others. The individuals who asked never asked for themselves or their own need but always sought for the needs of others or for a Divine cause. The individuals who received were always given to because of a practical, physical need, never because they themselves asked. Regarding non-believers, they too were used of God in supplying the needs of His people for His purposes, but only when God had so moved in their lives and displayed Himself were they prompted to participate in His plans through giving. This gives new meaning to: “The earth is the Lord's and all it contains and those who dwell in it.” (Psalm 24:1) Over all, the focus always revolved around God and His movement – spiritual activity among people.

Variety summarizes God's ways and this phenomenon known as Kingdom giving. As the Creator Himself is multi-faceted and limitlessly creative, the Bible sparks our creativity to give as well. Our place is to sense where God is working and to participate as He leads. And from this overflow, worship takes place with many expressions of gratefulness to God for all He has done and continues to do. May we be found boldly faithful in raising the spiritual consciousness of people around us that we all may experience the power of His Kingdom in our midst and reliance upon His provision and direction. And in the end, we will know it is by His doing and not our own – for His glory, not our purposes.
